Travel support

Travel support is determined by customary prices, and does not necessarily cover all of your actual travel expenses.

Annual travel home

You may receive support for travel to your home country once a year, if your education in Norway has lasted for at least one year. However, if your education starts in the spring semester, you may receive travel support when your study has lasted for one semester or more.

Support for annual travel home may be given for any time of the year, provided the academic institution approves your absence. It is a requirement that you have not conducted field work during the semester before, or are planning to conduct field work during the semester after your travel home. See § 48-4 in Lånekassen's regulations at lanekassen.no/forskrifter (in Norwegian only).

Field work

If your educational programme includes field work in your home country, you may receive support for a round trip. It is a requirement that you will collect source material in your home country, for this trip to be approved as field work. You must therefore attach a confirmation from your academic supervisor.

You may receive support for an extended academic year (i.e. summer support) if you are going to conduct field work in your home country, and must do so during the summer, since you are occupied with mandatory education in Norway during the academic year.

Summer support may not be granted if you have stayed, or are planning to stay, in your home country during any duration of the semester before, or during the following semester.

If field work is combined with a holiday, summer support may only be granted for the period that you are actually doing field work.

Final return to your home country

You may receive support for your final travel home after you have finished your educational programme under the quota scheme.

Support for your final travel home is provided if the return takes place within three months after graduation, or completed dissertation for Ph.D. students. Support may also be given if you do not complete your education.

You may also be granted support for your final travel home if you complete your education without support from Lånekassen. You must complete your education as a self-financed student within one year. Support is provided if the return takes place within three months after graduation, or completed dissertation for Ph.D. students. Support may also be given if you do not complete your education as a self-financed student in Norway, as long as the return home takes place within a year after you last received support from Lånekassen.
